BE A WOMAN.

Oh I've heard a gentle mother,
As the twilight hours began, Pleading with a son on duty, Urging him to be a man.

But unto her blue eyed daughter,
"Thou with love's words quite as ready, Vince the son the other duty—"Strive, my dear, to be a lady."

What a lady? Is it something Made of hoops, and silks, and airs;
To be more like a fairy?
Like the fancy rings and chains?

Is it one that wastes on novels Every feeling that is human?
Is it this to be a lady?
"Tis not this to be a woman.

Mother, then, unto your daughter Speak of something higher far.
Place high in the social heaven
"Woman" is the brightest star.

If, in your strong affection, That shall raise one to a true man, Urging your daughter no less strongly To arise and be a woman.

Yes, a woman! brightest model Of that high and perfect beauty, Which the mind and soul and body, Blend to work out life's great duty.

Be a woman; naught is higher
To the guided life of fame;
On the catalogue of virtue There's no brighter, holier name.

Be a woman! on to duty:
Raise the world from all that's low,
Place high in the social heaven
"Woman" is the brightest star.

sary precaution, if the report were true that divers burglaries and robberies had recently been committed within the precincts of the district of Basne by persons said to be disguised in black cloaks and blackened faces.

"Who comes so late?" called Pierre Soutier. And a clear voice replied:

"A friend, and a stranger. Open in the name of the saints and of the holy Christmas Eve!"

There stood upon the threshold a tall man, very scantily and shabbily attired, and with a face so begrimed that little of it could be discerned save a Grecian nose and a pair of bright blue eyes. Pierre Soutier scanned him rather doubtfully and questioned him closely before admitting him amid the aristocratic circle of his guests. Learning finally that the stranger was an unfortunate laborer from Arles, who had lost his way, and spent the little stock of money wherewith he had set out on his journey to obtain work in the northern provinces, he concluded to admit him. Something too in the manner and speech of the new guest, however clownish he at first sight appeared, won Pierre Soutier's respect, and excited a surmise that he had "seen better days." And under this impression he hastened to heap his platter with provisions, which was but sparingly partaken of, and then to invite the young man to join the dance in the next room. But when he approached the door and caught a glimpse of the pretty and plump Jeanette, coyly and unwillingly "setting-to" to the burly and stalwart Latorbe, who was flourishing his le's and waving his arms in the most graceful and approved style of provincial dancing, the stranger drew back and declined joining in the revel. He moved cautiously behind the dancers and shrank away into the obscure nook from which Philippe was gloomily observing his mistress and her bold suitor.
And whenever the eyes of Latorbe chanced to turn in that direction the stranger would shrink still further back into the obscurity.

At length as the evening wore on both musicians and dancers became tired out, and while the former sought refreshments in the next room, the latter seated in oriental gracefulness on the floor or resting on their heels with their backs supported by the wall, entertained each other with jokes, practical and theoretical, and with stories and traditions from the lore of their ancestors.

"In good faith," said one of the young peasants, with a glance at Mademoiselle Jeanette, "I would that I were bold and good enough to venture to the St.
Meure's Cross to-night."

"For what good," inquired the deep voice of Latorbe.

"Do you not know?" asked the osher, in a tone of surprise.

"How should I? I am but a stranger here."

"Know, then," resumed the other,
"that many and many a year ago, digging a well on the spot where stands the cross, the diggers came to a rock, which upon being struck with a pickaxe blow up killing one of the men and exposing to the eyes of the other a heap of gold."

"Ah!" said Latorbe, smacking his lips with a relish.

"And the man who was killed was a murderer, and he who found the gold was father Jean Baptiste, than whom the holy saints himself was not holier."

"Pish!" said Latorbe.

"Scoundrel!" said one of the older people angrily—"dost question the truth of what our grandfather told us?"

"Prove it," said Latorbe laughingly.

"Prove it yourself if you dare. When the good father Jean Baptiste died which was on Christmas Eve, an angel appeared to him and directed that he should cause a cross raised on the spot where the gold had been found; and the angel added that beneath that cross a treasure should be deposited by hands invisible, and that should any man whose conscience was clear and pure seek that treasure on a Christmas Eve he should find it; but that should he have been guilty of any great sin unrepented of he should meet with a fate too terrible to be revealed. And so the cross was raised after the good father's death, but no one has dared to seek the buried treasure. To-night is Christmas Eve. Let him whose conscience is clear and pure of all evil, or intent of evil, watch beside Saint Meure's Cross to-night at twelve."

"Pish!" repeated Latorbe contemptuously. "What an old woman's story! How do you know the gold is there? You'll not find me watching out in the freezing cold on St. Meure's heath this night or any other for the sake of a silly old woman's story. But come, comrades, let us clap hands and sing a song together, here comes the music and now for the dancing."

And so they danced on till the bell of the distant abbey of St. Meure, tolling over the bleak heath, chimed the hour of eleven, and then the revellers began to depart, for all good citizens of Basne must be at home by twelve o'clock on Christmas Eve and on their knees in prayer, else no good will befall them for the coming year. For spirits are out at that hour, both good and evil, and it is best that they should not be interfered with by the presence of any man unless his errand be a holy one.

Pierre Soutier's stranger guest having been politely shown by the light of flaming fir torch to a clean heap of straw in a corner of the stable stretched himself thereon for a night's repose. Another heap of straw in an opposite corner was, he had been informed the usual pallet of Philippe Rodet the under-dresser, though he had not yet made his appearance. Yet just as the stranger was sinking into repose he heard the low sound of voices without, and listening recognized that of pretty Jeanette Soutier her host's daughter.

"You know that I love only you Philippe, and that though my father swears that I shall never marry you or any other poor man—"

"Jeanette," interrupted the voice of Philippe low and earnestly, "do you believe in the story of St. Meure's Cross?"

"Believe in it? Yes, surely."

"Then suppose—suppose Jeanette, that I go there to-night?"

"Oh, Philippe!"

"My conscience is clear and pure Jeanette. I have never willfully done ill or thought ill. And if the worse happens it can be no worse than living without you—and all for want of a little money. I will go Jeanette. I will try my fortune to-night."

There were a few more whispered words between the two, and then the stranger, who had listened attentively from his couch of straw rose, and opening the stable door glided noiselessly out and took his way toward the cross on the heath.

At a big rock, half way between the hamlet and the cross, he paused. The moon had partially emerged from the dense clouds that blackened the sky, and, taking advantage of the faint light, the stranger unbuckled a belt from his waist, to which hung, concealed by his ragged clothing, a leathern pouch. He counted therefrom a handful of shining gold, which he wrapped in the pouch, and, rebuckling the belt, continued on his way.

"Now will I do a good deed," muttered he, "and make two young people happy. Little will they guess to whom they are indebted—certainly to no saint or angel." And he laughed lightly as he strode onward, humming gaily a court song, such as was fashionable in those times among the gay gallants of the French court. He did not know that, when he had passed beside the rock, a human head had been cautiously lifted from the other side; that, as he counted the money, two fierce dark eyes had eagerly watched him, and that now, as he passed lightly along with the gay song on his lips and the kind thought in his heart, stealthy footsteps were following him. He did not know it until, upon reaching the great stone cross, and in act of stooping down to deposit the pouch in a small hollow at its foot, a hand was uplifted behind, and he received a heavy blow on the back of his head.

Before the blow could be repeated he had turned and grappled with his assailant. "Wretch!" he hissed between his teeth, "I fled yesterday, for I was but one against three. But now are we fairly matched!"

Not so fairly as he had thought, for Latorbe was larger, and stronger, if not heavier than he. Soon he was borne downward, saving himself only by grasping the stone cross. The struggle was now desperate, and the stranger felt himself being surely weighed down by his adversary, when the cross to which with one arm he clung, moved, bowed, and as he loosened his hold and sprang aside, fell suddenly forward, and, striking Latorbe on the head, dashed him to the earth, crushing him dead beneath its weight.

Then the stranger arose and looked at his fallen foe. "Even so," said he thoughtfully. "The legend must be, in a measure true, though wanting the supernatural I had forgotten that the old cross was becoming undermined and its foundation insecure. But the villain of the legend has met his doom; now for the honest man and his reward."

He moved away into the darkness as he saw a figure coming slowly toward the spot. He heard first an exclamation of horror and then a cry of joy as the figure stooped to the foot of the cross.

"Jeanette! Jeanette! come hither!"

Two forms were now indistinctly visible through the darkness.

"Oh, Philippe, let us go from this horrible spot!"

"Stop, my beloved. Do you not see what the angel and the good saint Jeanette the Baptist have given us?"

"The good saint be praised!"

"I'll be sure it were mine, Jeanette."

"It is mine, friend," said a voice through the darkness. "Take it, and be happy!"

Jeanette screamed and sank on her knees. Philippe came close up to the spot whence the voice proceeded. "Ah, it is thou!" said he, in a tone of surprise and disappointment, as he recognized Pierre Soutier's late guest.

"It is I—neither an angel nor yet a saint, as the court hangers-on would tell thee. Hark!"

Far over the bleak moor came the sound of tramping hoofs, and then the long, wailing notes of a bugle. "The tattered wanderer stood erect. He threw back his head and turned eagerly in the direction of the sound, as a war-horse may arch his neck and pick up his ears at the voice of the trumpet. Then drawing from the same belt a small silver bugle, he sent forth a blast that swept sharp and clear upon the frosty air, and seemed to pierce far into the remote distance.

DUTCH FLAT ENQUIRER.

THERE will be preaching in the M. E. Church on Sunday the 23d, at a quarter to eleven A. M. Preaching at the Union Church to-morrow morning at the usual hours. In the evening the fourth lecture of a series will be delivered.

THE COLE-HISCOCK CASE.—This case has acquired considerable interest with the people of our State from the fact that one of the actors, and the surviving one, is a near relative of one of the U. S. Senators from this State. It will be remembered that some months ago, and during the session of the Constitutional Convention at Albany, New York, Gen. Cole shot and killed Hiscock under circumstances supposed at that time to be justifiable; subsequent developments, however, indicate that it was a murder, committed for the gratification of ill-feeling, and not as was first supposed, to avenge a mortal injury. The case was called before Judge Peckham, at Albany, on the 11th of November, when James T. Brady, Amasa J. Parker and William J. Headly appeared for Gen. Cole, and District Attorney Henry Smith and Lyman Tremaine for the people. United States Senator Cole accompanied his brother from the jail to the court-room. When asked what he had to say to the indictment, Gen. Cole replied that he wanted a trial. Mr. Brady suggested "Not guilty," and then the prisoner pleaded "Not guilty." Mr. Brady moved a postponement until the next Oyer and Terminer, and in support of the motion submitted an affidavit of Cole, setting forth the absence of several material witnesses and the illness of two very important witnesses, viz., Elizabeth Anderson and Mrs. Mary Cuyler of Syracuse. District Attorney Smith argued briefly against the motion, but Judge Peckham decided that the papers established sufficient ground to justify him in granting the motion, and he directed an order to be entered accordingly. With the family connections of the prisoner and his former standing in the community it is doubtful whether anything serious will result to him from the trial. It is not contemplated that those who are independent of the world's frowns shall be amenable, strictly to all the provisions of the law, either criminally or civilly, at least so it seems from the speed and indecent haste in which a poor devil is frequently hurried out of the world for a comparatively slight offence, and the slow tardy manner in which the rich are allowed to approach the blind goddess. Probably that is why Justice is said to be blind, that those possessing great wealth and influence may be overlooked in matters of a criminal nature.

CHRISTMAS TREE.—We wish to announce to the friends of Sabbath Schools that the M. E. S. School will hold its Annual Christmas Festival on the evening of the 25th at the M. E. Church. Any friends wishing to have presents hung upon the Tree will please hand them to either of the following committee on presents: Mrs. Hazard, Mr. T. McCluer, or Miss Staples. The public are invited to join in the evening's entertainment.

ROLL OF HONOR.—The following pupils attending the Public School are entitled to honorable mention for their good behavior for the past month: Sarah Halsey, Hattie Seltzer, Ella Belows, Ella Chamberlain, Alice Abel, Louis King, Fred Brown, Emma Hariman, Lillie McCulloch, Louis Lamberon, Orange Tillison, Lizzie Holmes, Susan Eddy, Ida Pittin, N. G. Gilman, Willie Cooke, Louis Schively, George Secord.

New Brooks.—Messrs. Sanderson & Fenton have opened the Essex saloon at Gold Run, and intend running that institution in a style not to be surpassed. The adage says a "new broom sweeps clean" if there be any truth in it, these gentlemen will certainly have a double benefit. Being the two handsomest men in the county, besides being famous for their affability and politeness, one can now scarcely visit Gold Run without calling to see their "smiling" faces as they administer their "spiritual" comforts.

That punch-bowl at the Orleans saloon does not hold over four gallons, and yet we have never seen it empty, notwithstanding the barkeeper is continually dishing out the contents. Mayer says "Tom and Jerry" is an established beverage at his house now. Lunch as usual.

MARRIAGE AND CELIBACY, An Essay of

Warning and Instruction for Young Men. Also, diseases and Abuses which prostrate the vital powers, with sure means of relief. Sent free of charge in sealed envelopes. Address: DR. J. C. YORGE, in 1850. In this age of deceit and charlatanism, it is a boon to the suffering to point out to them where they are sure of obtaining the wished for relief and cure. Under the care of the skillful Doctor the sick and troubled can disengage themselves of their burdens of pain, lay aside their cross, and secure health and happiness. If you are sick or in trouble, do not hesitate. Read the advertisement and follow the advice. Do not forget the number or the manner of directing your letters. Consultation Office, 540, Washington street, San Francisco.

HOPES FOR THE FUTURE.—In another part of this paper will be found the advertisement of the celebrated Institute established by Dr. J. C. YORGE, in 1850. In this age of deceit and charlatanism, it is a boon to the suffering to point out to them where they are sure of obtaining the wished for relief and cure. Under the care of the skillful Doctor the sick and troubled can disengage themselves of their burdens of pain, lay aside their cross, and secure health and happiness. If you are sick or in trouble, do not hesitate. Read the advertisement and follow the advice. Do not forget the number or the manner of directing your letters. Consultation Office, 540, Washington street, San Francisco.

MEDICAL ADVICE.—Dr. W. K. DOBRYT'S Medical and Surgical Institute is becoming a sine qua non to the welfare of our State and health of our citizens; and his rapidly spreading reputation, although it may excite surprise, is but the signal of skill, and follows as the natural result of such a course. We are personally acquainted with gentlemen who have suffered for years under chronic disease, and who have taken advantage of every available means that promised relief, but without success, until they called upon Dr. Dobryt, who, in an incredibly short space of time, has given them entire relief. It is gratifying to announce this fact, because the Dr. is a gentleman who seeks, not by deflation of others to establish his reputation or ruin of another's fame. The Doctor conducts his own Institute in such a manner must be gratifying to all his patients. His candid advice, and recommendations without charge, and the patient, after hearing his terms for treatment, can accept or reject at pleasure. In no case does the Doctor make a charge unless he effects a cure. This he is able to do, because all his patients are cured, which long experience has given, and no doubt consolation which appertains to that confidence. Persons afflicted with either acute or chronic diseases, would do well to consult the Doctor; at all events, it can do no harm, as for consultation he asks no fee; nor does he in his obstinacy, to his advice unless the patient places himself under his care. His offices are on Sacramento street, opposite the Pacific Mail Steamship office.—News

SPECIAL MEDICAL NOTICE.—Dr. CHARLES H.

TOZER would most respectfully inform the sick and afflicted that his MEDICAL INSTITUTE, located at No. 108 Montgomery street, next door to the Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, has relinquished its old modes of advertising, which has become so common with all the Quack Doctors of San Francisco, filling up the newspapers with false references, for the purpose of imposing upon strangers. ## DUTCH FLAT ENQUIRER.

A FARMER boy advertises in a Kentucky paper for a wife. He says:

"He wants to know if she can milk, and make his bread and butter, and go to meeting without silk, and make a show and splutter, and like to know if it would hurt her head to take up stitches, or sew the buttons on his shirt, or make a pair of breeches."

A LITTLE GIRL KILLED BY EATING FLY POISON.—A gentleman in Hartford took from the top of one of the globes of his chandelier a saucer, containing cobalt, which had been placed there for killing flies, and his wife put it away on the second or third shelf of a medicine cabinet. Two years old, got a chair and succeeded in reaching the saucer and taking it down, when it began eating the cobalt. The mother soon discovered the child eating from the saucer, and at once gave it an emetic and called in a physician. Every means was used to save the child's life, but in vain. The child was a very bright and attractive little girl, and its death is another warning, added to the thousands already recorded against the too common use of poisons for domestic pests, in houses where there are young children.

A FEW DAYS since, a gentleman connected with one of our railroad corporations, while taking a ride through one of the country towns accompanied by a French servant, had the misfortune to have his vehicle smashed, and himself and his companion thrown to the ground, by his horse taking fright and running away. The gentleman was somewhat bruised but not seriously. His principal loss being that of his wig, which had been shaken off, and on picking himself up, he found that he was in a worse condition, holding on to his head with the handkerchief, which he was using to wipe his forehead. "Well, Patrick," said his employer, "are you much hurt?" "Hurt is it? Ah, holy mother, sir, dear, do you see the top which I had in my hand?" Pat, in his terror and confusion, had mistaken the gentleman's portable head-piece for his own natural scalp, and evidently regarded his last hours arrived.

HAPPY MOMENT.—According to accounts, everybody in Denver is happy. It is said that it once took a man a week to get to the other side of a river. A case in point occurred the other day. A fellow was leading his blushing bride from the clergyman's house, when another individual rushed up and asked in an excited voice: "What the devil are you doing with my wife?" "Cool, that," said the newly married man. "This is the first time we have been married. It's all legal, for I paid ten dollars for the job, and think it cheap." "Bully for you, old fellow," said the stranger. "I paid five when we were married. I spent a good many five foolishly, but that is a little the worse speculation I ever had. You have my congratulations old fellow! This is the happiest moment of my life." And the wife's former husband quietly sauntered away whistling an air from "The Electric of Love."

RADICAL HORSE.—A countryman drove into Cleveland some days ago with a horse which, through some freak of nature had an enormous hump on his back, very much resembling a dromedary. The singular-looking animal attracted considerable attention, and some one asked the proprietor where the horse came from. He replied that Horace Greeley owned the horse until very recent, and when he called Jeff Davis, the animal, true to the Republican party, "got his back up," and now he couldn't let it down again. The explanation was entirely satisfactory.

"Don't you know," said a Kentucky soldier to his former commander, "No, my friend, I don't." "Why, sir, you once saved my life." "Ah, how was that?" "Why, my dear sir, I served under you at the battle of Fort Mifflin, and when you ran away at the beginning of the fight, I ran after you—oh I might have been killed, God bless you, my preserver, my benefactor!"

A SPEAKER in a public meeting enlarging upon the morality of the devil got off the following witty words: "When I was about getting religion the devil tried to dissuade me from it and told me if I did get religion I could not get into gay company, and lie, and steal and do such things; but I have found him to be a very great liar."

The Philadelphia Typographical Society was instituted in April, 1831, and chartered in May, 1832. Since that time it has paid to its sick members over $40,000, and for the funeral of deceased members about $2,500. From its beneficent fund, established in 1838, it has relieved the widows and orphans of members to the extent of $1,500.

A PRIEST was called upon to pray over the barren fields of his parishioners. He passed from one enclosure to another, and pronounced his benediction, until he came to a most promising case. He surveyed the sterile acres in despair. "Ah," said he, "brethren, no use to pray here; this needs manure."

"I am a charitable man," says Bro. Stiggins, "and think every one entitled to their opinion. I never hold selfish malice against any free—even against Mr. Mulberry, who has indirectly called me a sinner; but still, if the Lord has a thunderbolt to spare, I think it would be well bestowed on Brother Mulberry's head."

Very important discoveries of copper are reported in South Africa, within seven miles of a navigable river, and nearly on the sea level. A township has been laid off and quite a mining excitement has sprung up. Rumors of the discovery of silver and other important minerals are also current.

It has been observed that as civilization creeps westward on the Plains, the "buffalo grass" recedes correspondingly. Within the last few years it has disappeared entirely from Eastern Kansas and Nebraska. It is certainly accumulating on the part of the grass to go after the buffaloes.

The average fall of the Ohio river from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati is six inches per mile, and the distance as measured by the six miles, giving a total fall of thirty-six feet for that distance.

The principal leader waters of the New York Tribune at present are Horace Greeley, of J.B. Russell Young, Charles T. Condon, J.B. Hassard and Clarence Cook.

Lots on the main streets in Omaha, Nebraska, sell at $100 to $200 per foot; common stores rent for $1.20 per year, and black churches twenty-five cents for a "shrine."

SCIENTIFIC authorities say that if immigration into Paris should cease, and the supply of fresh blood be thus cut off, the population would die off in five generations.

A CARD FROM THE

of Waltham, Mass.

This Company has leave to inform the public that they commenced operations in 1850, and their factory now covers four acres of ground, and has cost more than a million dollars, and employs over 700 operatives. They produce 75,000 watches a year, and make and sell not less than one-half of all the watches sold in the United States.

The difference between their manufacture and the European, is brief; this European are made almost entirely by hand, and the result is of necessity a lack of that uniformity, which is indispensable to correct time-keeping. Both the eye and the hand of the most skillful operative must vary. But it is a fact that, except watches of the higher grades, are the product of the cheapest labor of Switzerland, and the result is the worthless Ankers, Lepines and so-called Patent Levers—which soon cost more in a complete repairs, than their original cost. Common workmen, boys and women, buy the rough separate parts of these watches from various factories, polish and put them together, and take to the nearest watch merchant, who stamps and engraves them with any name or brand that may be ordered.

How American Watches are made.

The American Waltham Watch is made by no such uncertain process—and by no such incompetent workmen. All the Company's operations, from the reception of the raw materials to the completion of the watch, are carried on under one roof, and under one skillful and competent direction. But the great distinguishing feature of their watches, is the fact that their several parts are all made by the finest, the most perfect and delicate machinery ever brought to the cheapest labor of Switzerland. Every one of the more than a hundred parts of every watch is made by a machine—that infallibly reproduces every succeeding part with the most unvarying accuracy. It was only necessary to make one perfect watch of any particular style and then to adjust the hundred machines necessary to reproduce every part of that watch, and it follows that succeeding watches must be like it.

The Company respectfully submit their watches on their merits only. They claim to make by their improved mechanical processes than can be made under the old fashioned handicraft system. They manufacture watches of every grade, from a good, low-priced and substantial article, in solid silver hunting cases, to the finest chronometer; and also ladies' watches in plain gold or the finest enamel and jeweled cases; but the indispensable requisite of all their watches is that they shall be GOOD TIME-KEEPERS. It should be remembered that, except their single lowest grade named the "Home Watch Company, Boston," ALL watches are made by them.

ARE FULLY WARRANTED

by a special certificate, and this warranty is good at all times against the Company or its agents.
